

SURVEY OF READING STANDS

Dr J. M. Gill

Many partially sighted people need to be very close to the material they are reading. Reading stands can greatly improve comfort by presenting the material at an appropriate height and angle. For the purposes of this survey, when a manufacturer has a UK agent, this is the address given. Many of the stands, particularly those made by Luxo Lamper (UK agent Malt Keyboard Ltd), are available from a number of suppliers who have given them a wide variety of names and model numbers.

This survey does not include overbed tables, which can be tilted for reading. Information on these tables can be obtained from Disabled Living Foundation, 346 Kensington High Street, London W14 8NS (Tel: 01-602 2491).

Table 1 is a summary of the main characteristics of the stands which are commercially available. The information in this article has been supplied by the manufacturers or their agents, and the author has not verified the accuracy of their claims.
